Chapter 1 by Sarah Hougen

"Don't forget my darling, that you shall never be alone." Those were the last words that Harlyn Chambers had heard before she was once again awakened by the nightmare that had almost become a second home to her. Harlyn sat up in bed and whipped the cold sweat from her forehead and arms. At least she didn't scream this time. She swung her feet over the edge of her queen sized bed and then proceeded to make her way to her bathroom where she splashed some cold water on her face. Harlyn stared at herself in the mirror. "Why do they have to happen to you? Why couldn't you just be normal?" She made her way back to her bedroom and turned on her bedside lamp without even touching it. Harlyn had only discovered these powers a few months ago. They started up after the accident, and she never really tried to suppress them. I mean, not only could she control things with her mind, she could also speak to the dead.
